The championship is sponsored by the Japan Golf Association and is the leading tournament in Japan for amateur golfers, with 140 players advancing through to the finals out of some 1,800 players taking part in preliminary rounds held throughout Japan.

Five members of the SENKO Golf Club advanced to the championship where Ishizuka was crowned champion, the first victory in the club's six years history. He also scored a place in the men's pro golf tournament "Sega Sammy Cup" (organized by Sega Sammy Group) planned to be held in Hokkaido in summer next year, where his performance will be highly anticipated.

The SENKO Group actively support efforts that promote health for employees by encouraging cultural and sports activities.
